

Lehners Sägerät

Directions for use

1. Place the perforated board on the cleanly stripped seed box and position correctly using the centering pins. Then press down the board with both hands to make small recesses in the substrate. Then substrate should be humid to ensure that the recesses remain in form when the board is removed.
2. After removing the perforated board, place the sowing device exactly on the seed box and insert the appropriate seed hole magazine to match the seed size selected. Turn the locking lever to the left to insert the seed hole magazine and the seed container. Turn the lever back to its initial position. Ensure that the color markings coincide (blue marking on blue marking and yellow on yellow).
3. Fill seed container with seeds.
The seeds should be stored according to the manufacturer's specifications and should be in perfect conditions. In other words: no damaged seeds or impurities should enter the seed container. As no perfect function can then be guaranteed.

Process natural seeds, such as viola, alyssum, herbs, spices or similar without seed container! only pour the seeds onto the seed hole magazine and distribute by shaking/vibrating the magazine backwards and forwards and from side to side.

If any problems arise when sowing a certain seed size with the magazines available (e.g. seed container jams), contact us to order a special magazine which will be produced to meet your individual requirements.

4. Slightly exert pressure to slide the seed container over the seed hole magazine. Verify whether the seed hole magazine is filled completely. If necessary, repeat procedure.
5. By pressing the slide each seed drops into the exact pre-formed substrate recess via a tube. The sowing procedure has now been completed.
6. Gently spray water over the seed box to moisten the seed box contents. The seeds are filtered into the substrate.
7. Always ensure that the device and the perforated board are stored properly in the supplied after sowing. The mobile parts should be cleaned with the brush supplied, if necessary.